

Mic Check:

The Hip-Hop Generation Has Something to Say

Damien Jackson - journalist

Mark Anthony Neal
- author and professor at Duke University

Manju Rajendran - activist

Professor S. Craig Watkins
- author and professor at University of Texas - Austin

Clyde Williams
- former adviser to President William Jefferson Clinton

FREE FOOD SERVED!

How has hip-hop culture spurred social change in America? Is hip-hop today's civil rights movement? Were the efforts of such organizations like Citizen Change, the beginning of a political movement or simply a trend during an election year? What responsibilities do artists and entertainers have in promoting political and social issues?

Over the course of 20 years, hip-hop has gone from being an inner-city subculture to a phenomenon that has saturated mainstream America while having an overwhelming global impact.

Co-Sponsors:

Duke College Democrats, Alpha Phi Alpha, Delta Sigma Theta, and Campus Progress.

Tuesday, March 7

at Duke University

7:30pm
in Von Canon C.

{CAMPUS★PROGRESS}